

Dana Gilkes

SUMMER ESSENCE

...

Based upon the simplest thing – the raw-sweet scent of rain, guavas in a tray
at the fruit-stand
a couple blocks down

and suddenly that pond in the gully next to the tier of trees the fruit ripening
in their own incense, plopping into the water and continuing down until they too had fallen into

slow

disuse.

I missed that falling sound:
confusing
circumstance with pluck,
the trees powerless
to hedge their leaves
and stem
the drop.

I also missed
the shaky
after-silence...

Or could be
it was just girlhood
that I needed
to discuss
with myself,

the time-loss there
I could never quite recover by fooling about

with reminiscence.

Calabash

A JOURNAL OF CARIBBEAN ARTS AND LETTERS

Volume 3, Number 2 / Fall-Winter 2005

Information about this work:

SUMMER ESSENCE

By: Dana Gilkes

Start Page: 46

URL: <http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/vol3no2/0302046.pdf>

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters is an international literary journal dedicated to publishing works encompassing, but not limited to, the Anglophone, Francophone, Hispanophone and Dutch-speaking Caribbean. The Journal is especially dedicated to presenting the arts and letters of those communities that have long been under-represented within the creative discourse of the region, among them: Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles, Maroon societies, and the Asian and Amerindian societies of the region. Calabash has a strong visual arts component.

Calabash is published by New York University. Please contact the publisher for further permissions regarding the use of this work. Publisher information may be obtained at:

<http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/about.html>

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters

© 2005 New York University